

ATHLETIC TRAINING

MINNESOTA STATE UNIVERSITY, MANKATO | Teach. Learn. Heal.

Recognized Program | Rewarding Career

Minnesota State Mankato's Athletic Training program prepares professionals to treat physically active patients as part of an integrated health-care team. As one of the oldest and most respected programs in the country, we have taken a leadership role in adopting a master's level program that will allow our graduates to secure the best jobs at higher salaries.

Why a Graduate Degree?

More than 70 percent of athletic trainers in the field currently have graduate degrees—and that number will rise dramatically in the near future, as the profession has established that the entry-level degree be at the master's level by 2022. Minnesota State Mankato's program is ahead of the curve—and will give you an advantage in the job market as well.

Great Education at a Great Value

All graduate students pay in-state tuition at Minnesota State Mankato, no matter where they are from. That means that you'll earn your master's degree at a fraction of the cost you'd pay at many of the other public and private universities.

Real-world Experience. Right Away.

Our courses are offered in a way that correspond directly to the clinical experiences you'll be doing at the same time. You'll be able to apply what you're learning in a real-world setting as you're learning it.

Facilities and Faculty

Our program has state-of-the-art equipment, top-notch campus facilities and clinical preceptors who serve NCAA Division I, II, and III athletes as well as highly competitive high school athletes. Our faculty are leaders in the field who serve on professional boards, are engaged in meaningful research and make teaching a primary focus. We provide one of the best athletic training educations in the country.
